

kissed me ... and more. It has been going on for a month. Alex has no idea. I feel incredibly guilty. But Alex is becoming unbearable. I can't talk to them about it. It's too big. They wouldn't understand. I know I broke their trust, and if they find out they'll be incredibly hurt. But I need this stress to go away. I can't tell anyone, but with them I can't even be relaxed. There's always something wrong, always something they need to complain about. I need someone I could just forget everything with. And I finally found that person. And it's not Alex. I do feel guilty. Very guilty. But I also can't deal with this right now. I have a decision to make.

It's been a few days. I wasn't able to write before so much has been going on. But I've take a decision. I'll have to talk to them all. It's the only way I can't let this happen. It's wrong. It's cheating. I'm not even sure what they're truly capable of doing. Sometimes they scare me.

they have this look. A look of pure hatred that makes me feel like the only thing stopping them from destroying me is social norms. I'm pretty sure I'll have to cut them off after the exams. I'm not sure I'm ready yet about it. It's too much stress for me. I'm constantly on edge around them, and now they won't help. As if. I can't keep this to myself anymore. This whole thing needs to come to light. I'll tell them all tomorrow. Or maybe after tomorrow. I have such a busy schedule, I'm not sure I'll be able to talk to them. I want to do it individually. They deserve to know before others. It would be nice to just throw them under the bus like this. Maybe I'll tell them tomorrow and the other the next day. Or maybe I should wait after the exams... no, I should do it before. It's still possible to fix things if I do it before the exams. After it will be too late. I will tell them tomorrow, and the other after tomorrow. In two days, this whole thing will be behind me. One last secret to hide. This wrong must be fixed, but I still want to give them a chance.
